Summer Internship in the Game Industry

Are you someone with an avid interest in video games? Do you want to work as a developer or artist in the games industry? Well, the GameBra^{ai}ns project is looking for you then.

GameBra^{ai}ns is looking for two summer interns (an artist/developer and developer) to work as a team and produce a small game as part of a three month summer internship project. No prior experience in games development is required. However, we will be looking for students to convince us they can deliver. So examples of your hobby development work or art portfolio will be considered.

Please send copies of your CV and examples of your work to:

Shane.Ryan@ndrc.ie before May 24th 2010

CV Submission deadline: Monday May 24th 2010

Start Date: Tuesday June 1st 2010

End Date: Tuesday August 31st 2010

Remuneration: €300 per month per intern

About GameBra^{ai}ns

GameBra^{ai}ns is an unincorporated partnership between University College Dublin (NCRA), National Digital Research Centre, NEAT Sciences and former Electronic Arts VP Les Edgar. The GameBra^{ai}ns project is building on research by the Natural Computing Research & Applications Group from UCD's Complex and Adaptive Systems Laboratory to produce a developer AI middleware toolkit. The toolkit will aim to reduce game AI development time, create more exciting game-play and reduce the level of technical knowledge/experience required to produce video game AI.

About the NDRC

NDRC (National Digital Research Centre) is an independent enterprise dedicated to accelerating research from idea to income. Our collaborative approach with technology and business innovators drives greater collective success while cultivating bolder attitudes towards invention and investment.
